ON THE FARM.

The Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society will be prominently at the front on the 16th, 17th and 18th of this month with its 45th annual fair. The forty-four which have gone before have had many interesting features and have done much to promote the agricultural interest of Weymouth. Perhaps at times not as much as might have been done, but the possibilities of Weymouth soil has been shown, and as we have the possibilities there is no good and sufficient reason why we should not improve them to a greater extent.

Scant rations of good food are much better than lavish feeding of inferior provender.

No horse is of much account if he has not a level head and a good, vigorous constitution.

Keep the cows clean and allow them only pure water to drink and you will have little trouble with stringy milk.

No matter if it is to be sold for cream or butter, milk should be cooled as soon as it is drawn from the cows.

It is better to wait until grain has thoroughly dried out before drawing to stacks or barns. A little dampness will often spoil it before threshing, or be still worse if the crop is threshed immediately and then put in bins.

There is not another class of men in the world to whom is granted such a privilege of uniting beauty with worth, pleasure with interest, as the farmers. And the most attractive beauty, too, is that which will grow more beautiful and more profitable at the same time.

A food chopper kept on the kitchen table is useful whenever potatoes or vegetables of any sort are prepared for the table. Take all peelings of any kind and run through chopper, and also dry bread, and you will have the finest kind of food for chickens, without cost, and will not have any garbage to dispose of.

Some gardeners use lime and tobacco water for destroying many insects which prey on plants. A half bushel of lime is emptied into a barrel of water, together with a bucketful of tobacco stems. This is well stirred up, and after it has settled for a day or two the clear water is syringed over bushes, killing all insects that come within its reach.

In Nebraska there once existed multitudes of blackbirds and the farmers became convinced they were damaging the crops. Poison was set for them and they, with the game bird, were destroyed in vast numbers. With the disappearance of the birds came the locusts and whole sections of the country were devastated.

It is a mistake to smear a tree with tar to keep off the canker worm. The tar should be put on a strip of canvass or very thick paper. If tar has been applied directly to the tree it should be scraped off, and the outer and loose bark carefully scraped off where the tar has had contact.

As soon as dug, which should be before severe freezing weather, the potatoes should be piled up and covered with straw and dirt. Here they may be left until the ground begins to freeze, when they may be put in the cellar or hauled to market. If the pile is on a well drained place it may be covered with a foot to eighteen inches of straw and as much dirt and safely left till spring.

If you cannot put up silage and must have something else, why not raise mangels? You can raise more of them to the acre than you can turnips, and you can avoid the risk of turnip taint. But whatever you do, don't fail on a good store of succulent feed for next winter. Cows do their best when on a clover. You can provide sweet clover hay for next winter, but succulence must come from some other source.—Weekly Witness.

Among small fruits the strawberry thrives especially well on recently cleared land. Upon such soil it makes a most satisfactory growth and fruitage, and much less labor is required to keep the weeds and grass down, as the ground is not impregnated with foul seed. This immunity of new ground, compared to old land, from weed and grass infestation, is a most important factor not only in strawberry culture, but in all gardening or trucking operations.

Consul Frank S. Hannah sends a report to the Department of Commerce and Labor relative to some recent experiments in the drying of potatoes under the auspices of the German Imperial Interior Department, which may offer a new field for farmers. The potatoes are reduced by this process to about one-quarter of their original weight, and can be kept in a good condition in this compressed form for an indefinite length of time. The military authorities have made thorough experiments with this product and have become convinced that its nutritious value is fully equal to that of corn, and that the dried potatoes can take the place of one-third of the former ration of oats. The fact that the potatoes are reduced to one-fourth of their original weight brings about a corresponding reduction in the price of freight, so that it will pay to grow more potatoes than has formerly been the case.—Michigan Farmer.

Faith in Man.

We do not appreciate how necessary it is for a man to believe in those about him just as far as he can and co-operate with them just as fully as you can. Yet this also is a condition of leadership. No matter how high the ideals for which we stand, we cannot expect others to follow us unless we have confidence in them. We cannot expect devotion if we return it with distrust. We cannot expect cooperation unless we are prepared to give freely of our confidence. The man who lacks faith in other men loses his best chances to work, and gradually undermines his own power and his character. The man who has this faith in other men gets his work done and impresses his own personality and ideals upon his age and his nation. It was this faith in men which made David, with all his faults, a worthy forerunner of Jesus Christ. It was this faith in men which marked every stage of the work of Jesus Christ Himself.—President Hadley, of Yale.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS DAILY.Expenditure to put on World's Greatest Food Fair totals very large. A small army of employees before and during the Exposition.

There is no other Food Fair quite like that held in Boston because there is no great business metropolis that so surely calls to itself the purchasing public from 200 miles around, as does the Hub in October. Hence the fact that all summer long the great railway systems centering in Boston are planning for the fall excursions, tapping the most remote sections of New England and, reversing the summer's outward go, turn the tide of travel Bostonward all during the harvest month. All this outside the 50 mile radius of Boston while within that radius is a population of more than three million people with better transportation facilities and a larger per capita of wealth than anywhere in an equal area in the United States. The Annual Food Fair in Mechanics Building is to the people as distinctly a New England Institution as is the State House or Boston Common. Mechanics Building is the largest Exposition building in the world and there are not many New England people of adult years but have been within its walls. Few, however, realize what a Food and Home Furnishing Exposition like that to be given in Mechanics Building, Boston, from September 27th, to October 26th, 1909, really means in an industrial way.

In the early history of Food Fairs it seemed to be the idea that manufacturers should provide both the exhibits and the attractions; now-a-days the management spends thousands of dollars for attractions and presents to the public an all around ensemble, that is at once interesting educational and instructive. No wonder Boston and all New England is proud of these Expositions, the largest of the kind in the world. It means much to the business interests and also to the wage earner. It insures practical commercial benefits and these benefits are immediate. The motto of the management is "Boston in 1909." This is appreciated by the big business houses of progressive enterprise and they co-operate with the management in every possible way. With the tariff settled and prosperity's wave already surging to its flood, there is little doubt that the 1909 Food and Home Furnishing Exposition will make a record surpassing even the high score of previous years.

For Sale or Rent.

The publisher of a newspaper has one thing to sell and one thing to rent. He has the newspapers to sell and the space in his columns to rent. Can anyone inform us why he should be expected to give away either the one or the other? He can if he so chooses, and he does, as a matter of fact, furnish a great deal of space rent free. But it does not follow that he ought to be expected to do it. It ought to be recognized as a contribution exactly as would be the giving away of sugar or coffee by a grocer. But, strange to say, it is not looked upon in that light at all, yet everybody knows that the existence of a newspaper depends upon the rent of its space and the sale of the paper as a merchant's success on selling his goods instead of giving them away.—Athol Chronicle.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 3, 1909.

To Dr. Frederick A. Cook has fallen the honor of discovering the North Pole and the long sought for pole was, and undoubtedly will be, more service than that which has been in the yard at the Pratt schoolhouse.

No law is good without a fair enforcing clause and in view of the increase rather than decrease of automobile casualties it might be a good idea for the next legislature to make the present law more effective by adding to it a heavy penalty for every city and town which shall fail to enforce all of its provisions.

A GOOD THING—PUSH IT.

One of the pleasant surprises in store for the visitor to Natick, and to many a resident, too, we venture to say—is the beautiful display in the children's gardens scattered all over the town, from North Natick to Weymouth. In these gardens, which are the work of the children, who are doing, but notwithstanding many discouragements, the children have been greatly interested; they often leave their play to go to work in their own gardens. It is much more fun to do than to work in father's. And father is pleased, and so is mother, at the good results. One boy has sold fresh beans almost all summer to campers by the lake. Many boys have earned a good many dollars from their vegetables. Last year one mother said her boy had "scared" enough money left to put in the bank. "But," she said, "the best thing of all is the way that garden has kept him off the streets nights as well as days. He loves to go in it in daylight and then he goes to sleep that he wants to go to bed and I'm more thankful to his garden than I can say, for what it's doing for him."

Another mother, unable to leave home because of her large family, finds her only recreation in taking out a rocking chair by the flower bed and looking at the flowers. Then, too, if Johnny's or Mary's garden is so pretty, Johnny's father thinks he'd better fix up the rest of the place a little more, and before anyone knows it, the whole yard begins to look beautiful.

Natick Bulletin.

OUR RIVERS.

Comparatively few people, even in Weymouth, realize the importance of our two navigable rivers which within the last few years have become factors of no mean significance.

First came the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. on Weymouth Fore River and although its beginning was small it is now the largest institution of the kind in America and in the construction of merchant marine or naval ships it stands at the Fore front. The Salem, built at these works, is the fastest cruiser in our entire fleet, the battleship Vermont in her trial trip was submitted to a sea going test, and New England coast in a fierce gale of snow and sleet and demonstrated that iron and steel can be made to swim under the most trying circumstances and subsequently the world made an enviable record and next it has been demonstrated at the works that boats can be made to do as effectively as work when submerged as when floating on the surface.

There are however greater achievements yet to come; the North Dakota now under construction at the works with about 35 per cent completion will in a short time be completed and when done will be the largest and most formidable craft afloat and indications are that the limit will not be reached even in the Dakota as specifications have been submitted for something of more tonnage and greater power.

It was not however of Fore River in particular that we wanted to write, but of the engineers and experts in searching for a location for a naval magazine reported that Weymouth Back River was the most desirable place on the Atlantic coast, both on account of its location and natural defenses. On the strength of this report the government condemned large tracts of land on both the Weymouth and Hingham side of the river for magazine purposes but as in most instances when a town, state or nation wants a piece of land it immediately becomes very valuable and in this particular case, cow pastures were assessed $15 or $20 an acre immediately had several ciphers added to the figures. This necessitated delay and litigation but in the main matters have now been adjusted and work for the largest naval magazine on this continent has begun, on the Hingham side of the river.

In addition to Lieutenant Commander Latimer and his corps of engineers and draughtsmen, there arrived August 12th a detachment of marines, consisting of twelve privates and a Corporal under the command of Sergeant C. O. Klein, Washington, D. C. Their duties are to patrol the reservation and no one is allowed on the property.

The first building to be constructed will be the barracks, on the junction of Beal and West streets, and will house quarters for a very much larger body of men, it is completed.

Last week work was commenced in constructing the railroad, which begins at the point on Fort Hill street near the Harry Standard place. It will be constructed as far as Weymouth Back River, with branches to the different magazines when they shall have been built. The work of excavating for the roadbed is under charge of government contractor Scanlon, who employs a force of eighty men, and twenty teams.

Tribute to Edmund S. Hunt.

It was my privilege, and a real privilege it was, to know Mr. Hunt intimately. We were frequently in each other's homes; for eleven years our intimacy continued, and during all these years it was mine to enter more and more deeply into the real man. This acquaintance was to me a great help in many ways.

Now that he has passed from earth, I experience a serious impoverishment of life.

Edmund S. Hunt was a thorough business man. Early in life he realized that he was in the world to do something real, something earnest, something honest, for himself. The self-degrading policy, that the world owes every man a living, and that the world was in debt to him, never has place in his thought, was never an evil genius hindering him in his daily work. The rather, it was as a major part of his business creed that he owed himself a living, that he owes the world at large the best he can do.

When in early business life he needed certain information which could be had only from a book printed in French, he bought a French lexicon and grammar, and alone, by day and by night, studied the language until he mastered it, was able to read the book, and so got the information. Again, he needed machinery for doing a certain kind of work; no such machinery was known; he gave himself diligently to the problem, invented the needed machine, was wise enough never to patent it, no one was able to steal his ideas, and the machine is still a valuable asset in the business.

Notwithstanding Mr. Hunt's crowding and often crushing business career, he was a diligent reader of books, a lover of exact knowledge. Of science he was by no means ignorant; a special love was biography and history. His unusually choice library, more than filling to the largest room in his elegant home, was a delight and an inspiration to those of literary turn of mind who were privileged to know him; to the owner those rooms were as a workshop crowded with tools of service. In that shop the owner often worked till long after midnight. Thus his was a fund of information, a stock of knowledge, that two men are not synonymous, most valuable this information and knowledge helped him in a critical and correct estimate of men and things as they appeared in the current news of the day, of which news he was constantly informed.

Mr. Hunt loved books; also, he loved trees. He loved flowers, too. In these things of nature the grounds surrounding his residence constantly spoke for themselves. At all seasons of the year, and especially from earliest spring to latest fall, the most careful passerby had evidence that a man of rare horticultural love and skill and outlay lived there. A tree was to him a life of great nobility and value; he who ruthlessly destroyed one was little short of an enemy to his neighborhood, was scarcely worthy of excited scorn and condemnation. As to flowers, and they of the richest, rarest and most expensive kind, Mr. Hunt may well have been appreciated as a village benefactor. He loved to grow them, he loved to give them to his neighbors. The old soldiers will not soon forget his gifts on last Decoration Day, thus helping them to lay God's flowers on the graves of comrades of the Civil War.

Nor did Mr. Hunt forget the living whose need for something more substantial than flowers was beauty is at best of fading. His extensive garden may almost be said to have been at the service of the neighborhood. Nor did he fail at times to open his pocket book for the relief of those whose need was specifically financial. That I was more than once made the donor of such gifts is one of the pleasant recollections of life.

In these and other ways, which cannot here be mentioned, Edmund S. Hunt filled a large measure of usefulness among men. His grave, which today is closing, shuts from human sight a man who may well be long remembered as one of Weymouth's most honorable citizens.

Immaculate Conception Church.

The extensive improvements which have been going on for some time, outside and in, at the Immaculate Conception church are now practically completed and are very much admired, especially so to the new and elegant organ which was formally dedicated last Sunday evening when nearly a thousand people listened to the following concert program under the direction of the organist Mrs. William Fitzsimmons.

GATHERED UP.

Every man may have his price, but it doesn't always accord with his market value.

You may know what a man really thinks of his father by what his children really think of him.

There is no such thing as the biggest half, in spite of the fact that most of us want it.

The more attractive stores a town has is the better impression it makes upon the stranger, and the more trade is kept at home.

One reason why life is such a struggle and it takes so much of our strength and time getting rid of the things we don't want.

"What would you do if a man should come in and offer to subscribe for three years in advance?"

"I'd tell him I couldn't suppress the story," sighed the country editor.—Washington Herald.

"Why are you in this prison, my friend?" asked the philosopher.

"It was the result of my own folly."

"In what way were you foolish?"

"I didn't expect the right kind of a lawyer for my case."—Washington Star.

"So you don't guide hunting parties any more?"

"Nope," said the guide. "Got tired of being mistook for a deer."

"How do you earn a living now?"

"Guide fishin' parties. So far, nobody ain't mistook me for a fish."—Kansas City Journal.

"My friends," said a itinerant preacher, "the scriptural rule for giving was one-tenth of what a man possessed. If you feel you can't afford so much, just give a sixth or fourth, according to your means. We will dispense with the next hymn and take up the collection."—Lippincott's.

"Theatre parties," said the prospective bride, "will cost about $200 annually, flowers as much more and bonbons, say $100. Certainly we can marry on $600 a year."

"And have a snore surplus," suggested her dad, "for such incidentals as grub and clothes and house rent."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A new two-cent stamp will be issued by the Post Office Department to commemorate the Hudson-Fulton celebration from Sept. 22 to Oct. 2.

Hitchcock has given the order for the new issue. Fifty millions of these stamps will be issued.

Red tape leads one to curious lengths. A writer in the Columbus Dispatch tells of a street railway car that picked up a young helper on its fender and carried it some distance through the street.

In making out the required report to the superintendent the employee wrote in answer to the query on the blank form, "What did the victim say?" She was carried along on the fender and then rolled off and ran away without saying a word.

Franklin Blanchard Dead.

With but a few hours illness from acute indigestion, Franklin Blanchard passed away at his home on Main street, Weymouth, Thursday, August 26th.

Blanchard, with a twin brother, was born in that part of Weymouth, which has always been his home, sixty-five years ago, and in the places which knew him best he will be sadly missed.

At the home which he loved he leaves a widow and one daughter, Miss Lillian, and to them the sudden blow comes as a heavy loss; the twin brother from whom he has never been separated excepting in his daily and home duties suffers a severe loss; the old South church of which he has been a member for forty years will miss his valuable services; he leaves a void in the rank and file of Wilsey Lodge, I. O. O. F., of which he was a long and esteemed member, and neighbors and friends young and old will miss him.

Funeral services were held at his late home on Sunday and were largely attended by relatives, friends and neighbors.

The services were conducted by Rev. Ernest R. Caswell, pastor of the First Baptist church, Worcester, and a quartette from the Old South church choir added several selections. The remains were taken to Mt. Hope cemetery under escort of Wilsey Lodge, and at the grave the Old South church choir sang a hymn performed by the officers and members of the lodge.

The esteem in which deceased was held was made manifest by many choice floral offerings from individual friends, relatives, shopmates and organizations with which he had been associated.

Waste Wood.

The waste wood heap continues to diminish and pass away.

A Massachusetts manufacturer of brushes recently made a discovery in Maine which supplied him with material exactly suited to his purpose. He went to the Pine Tree State to buy wood for the back of hair brushes and the handles of shaving brushes, and chanced to visit the yards of a spool maker who was using white birch. The spool man took a white part of the wood only, and was throwing away the red hearts. Thousands of cords had been burned or dumped in the lake to be rid of it.

The red hearts were exactly what the brush maker wanted, and at little more than the expense of freight he supplied his factory with the material.

This is typical of the trend of manufacturing. Waste of wood is still great, but it is decreasing. What one factory cannot use, another turns to profit. Formerly mills threw away half the forest-tops left in the woods, sawdust dumped in streams to pollute them and destroy fish, slabs burned in perpetual bonfires, and defective logs and low grade lumber abandoned as not worth moving.

This policy does not generally prevail now. Some mills have put in machinery to work up their own by-products, others sell their waste to manufacturers who can use it, as in the case cited in Maine.

Properties and uses of woods are now subjects of careful investigation, and the problem of turning to account the odds and ends and the by-products is brought more to the front now than formerly.

The United States Forest Service has taken up this study in a comprehensive and systematic way.

Some of the particular states are being conducted, usually in cooperation with the states concerned. The plan, when fully carried out, will include every commercial wood in the United States, not fewer than 200 species. The properties of each will be investigated, its hardness, toughness, elasticity, durability, weight, feel value, size of tree, regions where grown, the common names by which it is known in different localities, and other matters of this kind. A history of the wood's uses in the past will be given, and an account of present uses; together with suggestions for a wider range of usefulness in the future, by pointing out in what capacities it will serve best and be most valuable.

Veteran Firemen's Field Day.

The Union Veteran Firemen's Association of East Braintree has had many assemblies and many annual "Field Days," but none of them have been more interesting than that held last Saturday.

The parade, which began at 2.30, and in its line of march took in the principal streets of East Braintree and Weymouth, was one of the best in the history of the organization. The long columns of uniformed men, the several machines booked for the contest and stirring music of bands was a treat to the thousands of spectators, and the final events at Garfield Park were watched with interest.

Following is the story:—Oriental file, drum and bugle corps, 18 men, George W. Hearn leader, John Easton drum major.

Platoon of Weymouth police, Chief Thomas Fitzgerald commanding.

Union veteran firemen's association of East Braintree, 140 men.

Union hand tub, Peter Fowler foreman.

South Braintree veteran firemen's association, 90 men.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 600 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—headache, backache, nervousness, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, weakness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right, you will have no trouble with any of these.

Peter E. Burns, living at 21 Granite street, Weymouth, Mass., says: "I can truly give Doan's Kidney Pills my highest endorsement. I was a great sufferer from backache and had to give up work altogether for more than six weeks at a time on this account. It was agonizing for me to assume an upright position either after stooping or sitting for some time. I also had trouble with the kidney secretions which were too frequent in action. Although I tried everything I heard of, I received no permanent relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I obtained from the Weymouth Pharmacy. At the end of four weeks, not a single symptom was left in my system, and I cannot praise Doan's Kidney Pills too highly in return for the benefit I have received from their use."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McBirney Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

GATHERED UP.

Who is free? The man who is master of his own self.

To succeed one must sometimes be very bold and sometimes very prudent.

"Never let the world know you are downed in anything. Carry all off with a laugh or a song."

A man need only to correct himself with the same rigor he reprehends others and excuse others with the same indulgence that he shows to himself.

A country convert, full of zeal, in his first prayer meeting remarks, offered himself for service. "I am ready to do anything the Lord gives me," said he, "so long as it's honorable."

One young man said to another, "It is a long way from this world to the next."
"Oh never you mind, my dear fellow," said the other; "you'll have it all down hill."

"Although he goes to the club every night, he's always happy when it's time to go home."

"In other words, he doesn't go home till he's happy. Is that it?"—Exchange.

He—"Some girls are awfully conceited."
She—"Why?"
He—"They'll brag about making a fool of a man that was never anything else."
—Detroit Free Press.

Remember, Massachusetts is one of the great states of the Union. Eighth in population, and far more, far higher than eighth in her influence on the course of popular and political thought in the country, we cannot afford to send out to the world the statement that Massachusetts conforms in any way the Republican administration, which she so largely helped to put in power.

When Bolingbroke, who was at Aix-la-Chapelle during the treaty of peace at that place, at which time his attendant was not removed, was asked by an imperitinent Frenchman whether he came there in any public character, his lordship answered: "Not at all. I came like a French minister, with no character at all."

HE DEWED THE LINE.
"I suppose, doctor," inquired a visitor,
"a large proportion of the patients are imaginary?"
"Yes, sir, quite a large proportion."
"And your treatment in such cases, I suppose, is imaginary pills?"
"Well, I suppose you might call it that."
"Then, of course, for treating imaginary patients with imaginary pills, you send imaginary bills?"
"Oh, my dear sir, nothing of the kind.
There's nothing imaginary about the bills.
I have to draw the line somewhere."
—Stray Stories.

THE LIGHT REACHED Banker—Excuse me, neighbor, but every morning on your way to the train you walk across my lawn.
Potts—I know it isn't right. I'm awfully sorry, but I can't help it. I have only just time to catch the train. There's the lawn and the temptation and I'll be hanged if I can resist it.
"I know just how you feel, I'm that way myself. I've got a shotgun, and when I sit at the window and see you sprouting it brings on my hunting fever.
I've stood it so far—but tomorrow I shan't answer for myself."

SUBSIDED BABATH BREAKING.
Of Sabbath breaking north of the Tweed there is the story of the Scotch his neighbor, which has been fathered upon Sir Archibald Geikie. Donald was hammering away at the bottom of his garden when his wife came to the door.
"Mon," she said, "ye're making much clatter. What will the neighbors say?"
"Drat the neighbors," said the busy one.
"Oh, but Donald," it's vera wrong to work on Sabbath," expostulated the good wife; "ye ought to use screws."—San Francisco Argonaut.

A SCOTCH FARM.
A farmer living in a wet and late district in the east of Scotland found times and seasons so much against him that he decided not to renew his lease. Meeting his landlord the other day he said:
"I can mak' nothin' o' sic wat and sor-land, and I'm no going on wi' it or I'll be ruined."
"Well, John, take time to think o' it," said the landlord; "no doubt we'll be able to come to terms. I might let you have the farm at a reduction on the acre."
"Ah, laird," replied the farmer, "your land should be let by the gallon, no by the acre?"—Tit-Bits.

The Fool and the Auto.
If a man should put rubber tires on the wheels of a locomotive and drive the same at express speed, or anywhere near it, over an ordinary wagon road, he would be pronounced a suicidal lunatic, says an exchange. Yet this is exactly what men, presumably of sound mind, are doing every day with their motor cars. An automobile is practically a locomotive, and like the latter, it can be driven with safety, at any speed faster than a jog trot,
only on a specially prepared track, free from obstructions that might derail it, ditch it or cause it to collide with rocks, telegraph poles and other things by the roadside. An elaborate system of signals is required to prevent collisions between locomotives on the rails, but our road locomotive zig-zag over uneven and treacherous roadbeds, turn "hairpin" curves on steep grades and take a hundred other chances that would make a railroad engineer's hair stand on end.
The daily bulletin of automobile fatalities ought to bring the conviction that common roads are not built for running locomotives at even the lowest speed now authorized by law, and that the regulation of automobiles need to be made stricter and unflinchingly enforced, rather than liberalized.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Income Policy

Toledo, Ohio.—I do not blame you for feeling anxious regarding the future of your wife and child, and I agree with you that it is your duty to provide for them now, while you are making more than a fair living. Of course, in time, your savings will make them comfortable. But as you say, in the meantime, in case of your death, they would be left without an income. At your age, 30, it would cost you about $100 a year to provide an income of $30 a month for 20 years after your death. As this is only about $2 a week, you could set this aside without interfering materially with your savings-bank deposits. $30 a month would be $360 a year, and that would at least keep the wolf from the door, and would be continuous benefit for 20 years. It would be well if you would write to "Department S," Prudential Life, Newark, N. J., stating your age and asking for a copy of the new Monthly Income policy.

The Weymouth Fair will be held next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Put in the exhibit the best you have from the field and shop, and give the town a good name.

It took Wakefield fifteen years to discover that the vertical system of handwriting was not a practical or desirable system for business purposes and Weymouth has come to the same conclusion.

The end has come to Harriman, the great railroad magnate, but he leaves an enduring monument to enterprise and skill. At thirteen years of age, poor and unaided, with but two years of schooling, he faced the battle of life and came off conqueror.

There is no question but that both Peary and Cook have come nearer placing the stars and stripes at the north pole than has ever been done before and the pity is that they could not have got together and saved much of the bickering now going on in regard to it.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The opening of another year of High School shows a somewhat smaller enrollment than last year.

The seniors number forty-nine, the juniors sixty-seven, the sophomores sixty-one, the freshmen one hundred and nine, making a total of two hundred and eighty-eight pupils.

The junior and senior classes are the largest on record, the freshman and sophomore classes being somewhat smaller than usual.

Several scholars from other high schools have entered this year. Harold Williams from Middleboro entered the senior class, Elsie Taylor from Philadelphia the junior class, Elsie Holmes and Wellington Holmes from Adrian, Michigan, the sophomore class.

The corps of teachers and their departments are as follows: Mr. Sampson, principal, will teach United States and English history, Mr. Wells, the physics and chemistry classes, the science section, Miss Curtis of Room 2, has the Latin; Miss Sherry of Room 6, English and German; Miss Wentworth of Room 8, Mathematics; Miss Farwell of Room 3, Freshman algebra, physiology and history; Miss Chapman of Room 4, the Commercial course; Miss Smith of Room 5, Latin, Greek history and freshman Commercial course; Miss Duffy of Room 9, Roman history and English; Miss Hoyt of Room 3, who is taking Miss Shaw's place, the French classes; Charlene's new French grammar will be used in place of the old ones.

Ward Humphrey and Richard Cutler, both of the class of '09, have returned to take post graduate courses.

Light Artillery Reunion.

The 30th annual reunion of the 10th Mass. Light Artillery was held at the United States Hotel, Boston, on Labor Day, Sept. 6. The following officers were elected: Oliver Houghton, president; Samuel N. Bushee, vice-president; Rex, Wm. H. Walbridge, chaplain; Geo. K. Walton, secretary and treasurer; executive committee—Oliver Houghton, Wm. H. Walbridge, Sidney W. Allen, George W. Ballard, Sidney E. Colburn, Geo. K. Walton, Martin Sica.

Gas Light and Power Hearing.

The state board of gas and electric light Commissioners gave a hearing Wednesday, in Boston, on the petition of the Weymouth County Gas and Power Co., of which Patrick J. Nevin is president. The petition asks for authority to issue the original $1,000,000 of capital stock. The hearing was postponed to Sept. 27 in order to give the petitioners a further opportunity to submit data. Quite a number from here attended.

Republican Town Committee.

The Republican Town Committee held a well attended meeting last night and prepared for the caucus to be held Sept. 21. J. Walter Cronin was placed on the committee in place of Wm. Tobin, deceased.

The Little Boy's Nightmare.

I had a awful dream last night; I dreamt that schoolhouse bell. Come running after me and give a awful frightful yell.
An' that it classed me through the town an' out across 'till I cry.
An' then it stopped an' yelled at me: "You think you're mighty slick!
But I'll be coming after you another day for long."
An' when I do I think that you will sing another song.

I dreamt the schoolhouse glared at me; its windows looked like eyes.
An' that the big doors was a mouth of most tremendous size.
An' that it rolled its window eyes an' gnashed its big door teeth.
An' shook its front stair chn that swung an' wobbled underneath.
An' growled: "All right for you, my boy, but you can't get away.
I'll have you back inside of me first thing you know some day."

An' all the words in all the world jumped out of all the books.
An' come a-runnin' after me with most bloodthirsty look.
All of them had their letters wrong, which made them look real queer.
The big five syllable ones, too, was scattered far an' near.
An' all of them kept chatterin' as long as 'till I was in sight.
"You got to come back to th' school an' learn to spell us right."

An' then a lot of 2-and-2's come from th' schoolhouse door.
An' kept a-singin' all th' time about how they made it.
An' Long Division hobbled an' made a face at me.
An' some other kept a-cryin': "Can't you see that G. C. D?"
The jiggerjaggers jumped up at me and scared me half to death.
By tellin' me to bound the lands an' never stop for breath.

So I woke up an' pinched myself to see if I was here.
But all to-day I've gone around an' felt extremely queer.
I walked apart th' schoolhouse an' it looked about th' same.
But something somehow mattered, an' I thought it called my name.
Aw, what th' good o' havin' any name vacation?
It spoils it all to know you've got to go to school some day.

OLD COLONY LEAGUE.

TEAM STANDING.
Team Won Lost Percent
Dewey 12 7 .632
Rockland 11 8 .579
Stoughton 10 9 .526
Tunton 9 11 .450
Randolph 8 11 .421
Quincy 7 11 .385

The Deweys have regained the lead in the race for the pennant in the Old Colony League, and if they defeat Stoughton Saturday they will be the champions of the league.

The Deweys defeated Stoughton Saturday 10 to 1, Quincy, Monday morning 7 to 5, and Rockland, Labor Day afternoon 9 to 5, thus winning three consecutive games.

Dewey 10, Stoughton 1.
The Deweys batted Howard, Stoughton's Southpaw, all over the lot last Saturday afternoon at Garfield Park and defeated Stoughton 10 to 1. The summary:—
Innings: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Dewey 4 0 1 0 0 2 0 0 3

Dewey 7, Quincy 5.
In a see-saw game Dewey beat out Quincy at Garfield Park last Monday morning by the score of 7 to 5. Adams was too good for the Deweys at the beginning of the season was in the Deweys lineup again, and was hit hard, Thompson was obliged to come to the rescue at the end of the ninth with the bases full and two out he easily retired Lobergan, closing the game with a victory. The summary:—
Innings: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Dewey 1 0 1 0 2 0 0 0 7

Dewey 9, Rockland 5.
The Dewey kept up the winning streak and defeated Rockland 9 to 5, at the Labor Union picnic at Ridge Hill grove last Monday afternoon. The Deweys batted Martin out of the box in the sixth and Tift, the old Brown pitcher replaced him who was also hit hard. The game was called during the last half of the ninth by Umpire McLaughlin, as the two teams for the players to see the ball. The summary:—
Innings: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Dewey 1 0 2 1 0 0 0 0 9
Rockland 0 0 2 1 0 0 0 0 3

MAN'S ENEMIES.

The Small Foes Are the Most Deadly and Destructive.

In one of Herbert Wells' brilliant stories the terribly scientific and practically invincible Martians have invaded the earth, and conquered England are stopped in the midst of their victories and utterly destroyed by the attacks of microscopic foes. Infinite small organisms, germs of diseases which man has become in some degree immune, play the wonderful warriors of a planet never invaded by these earth foes. What the greatest could not do the unseen and unknown living seeds of death accomplish.

More clearly every day the world understands that in the life and affairs of mankind the small and the hidden are the most deadly and the most destructive. The germs of the human race are extremely small. All the forces of the human race are extremely small. All the forces of the human race are extremely small. All the forces of the human race are extremely small.

The monkey, following the usual procedure, learned to get his food from a box, the lid of which fastened with a key. The key, however, could not be withdrawn from the lock. After the monkey had become familiar with the device and could operate it as readily as a man could do the experimenter took the key out of the lock and laid it on the floor in front of the box. The monkey picked up the key, played with it, but made no attempt to use it. Then the experimenter took up the key, and fifty times in succession, with the monkey two feet away watching every motion, he unlocked the box. The monkey was not startled by the simple act. He had learned to open the box by making certain movements. He had no idea of the key as an instrument in the process. We sometimes think instruments and means and causes. The animal thinks in terms of the means and the end.

"IN A BAD WAY."

Many a Weymouth Reader Will Feel Grateful for This Information.

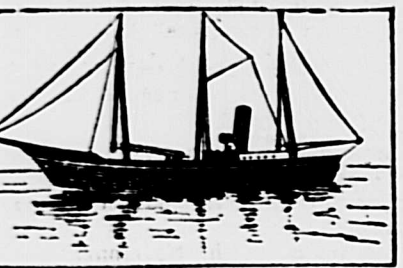

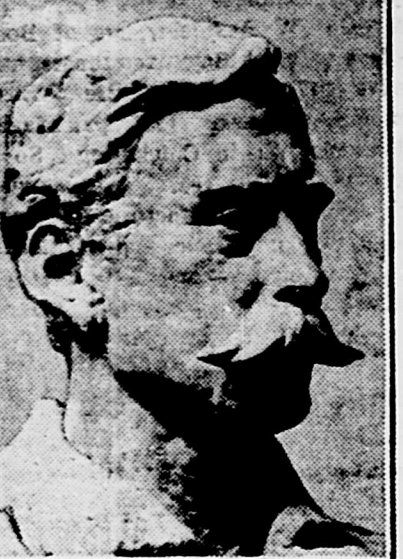

When your back gives out; Becomes lame, weak or aching; When urinary troubles set in; When your kidneys are "in a bad way," Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you. Here is evidence to prove it:—
Mrs. E. H. Leighton, 30 Maiden St., Boston, Mass., says: "I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have never lost an opportunity during the past three or four years to recommend them. I suffered intensely from backache which kept me from getting my proper rest at night. I would be so lame and sore in the morning that I could scarcely drag myself out of bed. The doctor's medicines and numerous other remedies I tried, proved utterly useless and at the suggestion of a friend, I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I am glad to state that they cured me and made me feel better in every way."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

ON THE FARM.

Oats make an excellent food for the poultry, providing they are of the right kind. The long, slim oat, with plenty of husk or hull is poor food for anything, but the plump, meaty oat is a good food for all stock, including poultry.

It has been demonstrated again and again that early fall plowing is a most effective means of destroying weeds, especially the perennials which are propagated from roots that winter in the soil rather than from seeds.

There are less apples raised in the United States today than there were fifteen years ago, and we are exporting more of them. In 1895, we produced 60,000,000 barrels, and in 1908, 23,000,000 barrels of apples. In 1902, we exported 2,800,000 bushels of apples; in 1907, 7,900,000 bushels.

Tests at the experiment stations show that nitrate of soda is superior to both barnyard manure and mineral fertilizers for forcing the growth of tomatoes, and that nitrate of soda is only slightly less effective than the complete fertilizers. These results, however, do not apply in the case of poor soils or upon heavy crops.

To insure a crop of large eggs the raiser must select each fall the hens that lay the desired size and it is these birds only that should be retained for breeders, all others that do not measure up to the standard being disposed of. Size and color of eggs is simply a matter of selection and the raiser should be guided by the results of several generations. The standard should be firmly established along the desired lines.

Spring setting of grapes is usually advised for the amateur. While this may be true in north central latitudes, good results may be obtained by setting any time when the soil is in proper condition and the vines are dormant. Fill planting has the advantage that it can be done at a time when there is not a rush of work on the farm and the job will be more carefully done. It also gives the soil time to settle, so that the plants will not suffer from a lack of moisture, as they are liable to do if planted in the spring.

It can not be that the butter fat in milk is obtained from the fat stored in the tissues of the cow, otherwise the animal would soon become emaciated. Cows obtain the butter fat in milk from the food they eat and digest, and not from the residue or accumulation of fat in their bodies. Reason as we may, observation teaches that the butter fat in milk comes from the food they consume and digest, and to produce a large percentage of cream the rations of the cow should be rich in the elements of nitrogen and carbohydrates, which are found in flensed milk, puddings, bran, corn meal and ground oats.

It behooves the farmer to do something more than adopt the means of getting the largest return from the soil. That is essential, but it is also essential that he should know how to market his crops as well as to grow them. The consumer must likewise study the means of meeting the farmer halfway, and so far as possible, help to abolish all unnecessary impediments between the hand of one and the mouth of the other. The cost of living has become so excessive in the United States that a study of the means of reducing it is the most important and engrossing problem that confronts the nation. —Philadelphia Record.

The farmers' families have a chance to make money from fruit that would otherwise spoil. It should be put up in glass cans, mostly in pint sizes, and sold in the nearest town. It is easy to build up a trade, because many people are suspicious of ordinary tin canned goods, and will pay more for fruit put up in glass. An extra charge should be made for the cans, to be refunded when the can is returned. —J. E. Fitzgerald, in the American Cultivator.

A method that has for the past few years been used with considerable success for causing fowls to pass through the molting period early and uniformly consists in withholding part of the fowls' food for about two weeks, which stops egg production and reduces the flesh of the fowls, and then feeding heavily on a ration suitable for the formation of the feathers and general upbuilding of the system.—Farmers' Home Journal.

Now that the hatching and brooding season is over all old and useless hens should be put in shape for the market before molting time. Shut them up in a semi-dark coop, where they cannot exercise much and on nourishing food. A mash composed of cornmeal, middlings, meat meal and bran, is an excellent food for fattening fowls. Make it at least fifty per cent cornmeal and cook thoroughly. Feed often, but not more than they will eat up clean. Supply them with water and they will be ready for the market in a couple of weeks. If milk can be secured give it to the fowls instead of water.—Farmers' Home Journal.

THE LION'S SHARE.

A Rivalry in Love and the Way It Was Ended.

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)
It was their first summer out of college, and both had had a hard time. But now a girl had come between them.

"You can't have her, David," Carrington had said when Royal had told him. "I love her, and I'm not going to let you get her."

David Royal looked at his friend steadily. Then he said: "Did you ever think, Victor, that you always came out ahead at school—that you always took the lion's share? But it was because I let you, not always because you deserved it. I gave up the scholarship to you because I had more money and you didn't. I didn't do the faculty selected you for that experimental trip to South America. I wanted to go, and my chance was as good as yours, but when I knew David set you over me, I let him have it. I had other plans, and the trip came to me. But this time it's different."

Carrington laughed easily. "Oh, you were always a trump, David," he said. "You're a friend worth having. But you can't have the little girl."

"Can't I?" Royal asked, and something in his tone made Carrington look at him sharply. "See here," he demanded, "you haven't asked her?"

"No, I haven't. I'm going to," Carrington shrugged his shoulders. "Don't talk to me like that, David. I think she likes me best."

Royal clasped his arms about his knees and looked out toward the sea. "If she should not care for me," Carrington said, "I should find another girl."

Royal's eyes flashed. "Do you see now why I won't let you have her?" he asked. "Because you won't make her happy. Because you must marry a man who will be constant till he dies."

"Oh, I'd be constant enough," Carrington said, "but that's not the question. The question is to get her. And again—I don't like to say it, David, but you aren't exactly a lady's man."

"Thank heaven," was the succinct reply. "Well, we won't fight over it," said Carrington. He rose and stretched his tall figure to its full height and then he turned to Carrington and blowing his fair hair, the smaller man was forced to admit his beauty and fascination.

And if he voiced his thoughts, some would behind them, "Are you worshipping the sun god?" Carrington turned, and there was Dulce—Dulce, the desire of both of their hearts.

"You look like a young brave worshipping," she repeated as she sat down on the grass beside Royal and spread out her long fingers.

"I came over to tell you," she said, "that we have tonight. Father's rheumatism is worse, and he is going to a sanitarium, and he wants you two to come up to the hotel for a farewell dinner. He's going to have everything that's indigestible, from lobster to cucumber. It's a case of eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die."

They laughed, and Carrington said: "I'm glad you said that. You look like a rose."

But David said nothing, and Dulce asked abruptly, "A penny for your thoughts?"

"They have flown on the wings of the wind," David told her. "Daisy is dreaming of a girl. He's in love, Miss Carew," laughed Carrington.

Dulce caught her breath. "In love?" "Yes, and I'll bet he won't get her." Royal turned suddenly and looked at his friend. "Please," he said, and his voice was stern, "don't let me hear you say that. And you needn't bet. I don't dare hope that I can win her."

A shadow lay deep in Dulce's eyes. "You are talking in riddles," she said. "Are you really?" Carrington interposed. "You must tell me about it." Dulce tried to speak lightly.

"Perhaps," David said, "you won't care to tell us."

As the two men walked to the clubhouse where they were spending the week end Carrington said lazily: "I'll go up to see to tell David. You'll find him up to his eyes in congratulations in the morning."

But David's eyes met his squarely. "Don't be too sure, Victor," he said. "Carrington was so sure that after dinner he took Dulce down to the beach for a walk, while David and their host smoked on the terrace. And, in spite of the uncertainty of the weather and moonlight, Dulce refused him."

David knew what had happened when his friend threw himself into the sea. He had tried and did not try to see Dulce alone again.

He did not dream, however, that Carrington would exact from him any further sacrifice for friendship's sake. That night he sat up with Carrington on the beach under the stars Carrington said: "Old fellow, I don't see how I am going to live without her. Let me have another chance before you ask her."

Something of the love that he had felt for the boy, Victor, for whom he had given his heart at school and college, surged into David's heart. "If she loves me," he said simply, "I can wait. I'll give you another chance, Victor."

But David did not know what his temptation was to be. Dulce came down to the beach next morning for her early dip, and in her bathing suit of soft, shimmering green she was like a nymph of the sea.

"Father had a bad spell after you left," she said, "so we shall stay a few days longer."

David had come up for a swim at dawn, Carrington told her. She smiled. "I shall try to make the end of the iron pier," she boasted, "and I want to go alone, just to be sure I can do it."

"It's a bit dangerous," David told her anxiously.

"I am as strong as an ox," she said, "and I shall be all right."

And with that she waded in, to strike out presently into deeper water. The two men, watching her, strolled along the pier. David said to a woman who was walking in the same direction: "As they watched her she saw her hands go up suddenly, and a faint cry came across the water."

"Ah, Royal, she's going down!" Carrington cried and stood staring. David was stripping off his coat, kicking off his shoes.

"Get a rope and a life belt if you can, Victor," he directed rapidly, "and throw them to me. I'm going in."

ON THE FARM.

A good growth the first year of the life of a calf costs less than at any other age.

One objection to working horses in the rain is the increased liability of sore shoulders.

Successful poultrymen, in order to keep their poultry on a paying basis, are continually culling their flocks.

A handy pruning tool is a sharp chisel in the end of a stiff pole. Set against a limb and struck with a mallet, a clean cut is made.

One of the great values of green food for fowls, it is said, lies in its ability to aid in the digestion of other things—Farm and Ranch.

Never fill an old orchard with young trees. The soil is often exhausted by the growth of the old trees. It is best to start a new orchard before the old one is exhausted.

It has been demonstrated again and again that early fall plowing is a most effective means of destroying weeds, especially the perennials which are propagated from roots that winter in the soil rather than from seeds.

That legislative measures are necessary with regard to the supply of milk seems to be questioned by no one, for it has been proved over and over again that ten per cent of the general milk supply is tuberculous.

Dairy products fluctuate less in price than probably any other product of the farm. Wheat and cotton and other crops may rapidly ascend or descend the scale of prices, but the dairyman knows that his products will sell at a fair margin of profit every month in the year.

Proper feeding of the dairy calf must begin when the animal is young. If we feed the growing heifer nutritious food to develop muscle and bone, and an abundance of coarse fodder to develop a capacity for digesting and assimilating a large amount of food we may expect these characteristics to show to a greater or less extent in the full grown cow.

Spring setting of grapes is usually advised for the amateur. While this may be true in north central latitudes, good results may be obtained by setting any time when the soil is in proper condition and the vines are dormant. Fall planting has the advantage that it can be done at a time when there is not a rush of work on the farm, and the job will be more carefully done. It also gives the soil time to settle so that the plants will not suffer from a lack of moisture, as they are liable to do if planted in the spring.

The most appropriate time to talk about good seed corn is not March 1, when the time for testing is at hand, but the few weeks preceding Oct. 15, during which time the choicest and earliest maturing ears can be secured and thoroughly dried and cured before heavy frosts take place. While at the job it is well to secure more than one needs for himself, for in all probability, some hapless fellow will not take the necessary precautions and next spring will be anxious to get the surplus seed and pay a good price for it.

It is only repeating advice to people—some of whom may be very careful in everything else connected with a farm—that however good it may be, it will be likely to be heeded. How often we have suggested the manuring of fruit orchards, we cannot remember, but probably it has been half a score of times or oftener. Still, the great experience is that this part of the duties of the farmer continues to be largely neglected. On what ground, other than pure thoughtlessness, it is thus neglected, we can not imagine, as no crop on the farm will return a greater profit from the application of a fertilizer than the fruit orchard.

Home Training.

These baptismal obligations cannot be satisfactorily met by sending the boy or girl to Sunday school for an hour Sunday afternoon during the years of childhood. Christian nurture is a matter of years, requiring the highest wisdom and a Christ-like patience. The daily training in the home is necessary. Right here is where the finger of emphasis needs to be placed in our time. Never in the history of the world was so much thought given to the children, and yet something is evidently lacking. There is a large and increasing literature devoted to the interests of childhood, books and magazines are discussing all sorts of questions pertaining to the physical, mental and moral education of our boys and girls. There are societies for preventing cruelty to them. One of the reforms earnestly urged today is adequate legislation to prevent the cruelty of employer or parent from sending children to work at too early an age.

The juvenile delinquent has engaged the attentions of wise and philanthropic men. The children's courts have come into being, and growing out of them is the Big Brother movement. The public school has been developed to a high point of efficiency; an army of trained educators, many of them gifted specialists, are devoting their best time and thought to the education of the young; the kindergarten is being established everywhere. There is a growing demand for more playgrounds for them; we have all kinds of organizations among the children themselves. There then is the Sunday school, with its host of teachers and its vast literature. Surely the thoughtful world is aroused to the value of the child. And yet, no careful and candid observer can say that there is not something wrong. Something is missing. There is a lack of reverence, of obedience, of respect for law. The home is not doing its part, and nothing can atone for neglect of home training.—Dr. Robert J. Kent.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 17, 1909.

Don't get discouraged, the foot ball season has been started into the base ball season and there will be something doing on earth.

Omaha comes in several laps ahead of Minneapolis, but a few Sundays ago at Minneapolis, a minister opened a ball game with divine (2) service and the people "liked it for its brevity". Rev. Mr. Widge of Omaha, not to be outdone, delivered a short sermon and sang a hymn as a prelude to a 12 round game between a Chicago and Omaha pugilist. What we now need is "More Light on Long Summer vacations, the "unfilled bill" and "open valve".

"The damage by frost about town has been quite large."

"A hog pen was built to small quite badly by persons in the square, needs attending to by the board of health."

The above items were in the Gazette twenty-five years ago.

Up to the corresponding date in 1909 we have had no serious frost and vegetation of all kinds, which escaped the dry weather of July and early August, is doing well.

We now know of no hog pens or village improvement society or law and order league might begin work in the square and radiate out to quite a distance and possibly find something which might be removed without injury. In fact, there is no place or community, however good it may be, which, or which, might be improved by a well organized improvement society.

The little cargo of water pipe was only a drop in the bucket as to what has followed. We have grown to a well equipped system of taking the water from the spring fed supply pond, pumping it up and stand pipe, nearly 400,000 feet of supply pipe laid, over 400 hydrants in place for fire and other purposes, and in lieu of a few water takers to begin with we now have over 3,000 families who are supplied and in addition there are about 300 stores, factories, school houses and other regular takers of the town water.

As we have before stated there is but little doing, as a whole, in politics, and the only two features on which there will be much of a contest with us are those of County Commissioner and Representative to the General Court. The first fight will be fought out at the convention and the latter at the polls. Evan F. Richardson of Millis, the County Commissioner, is serving his first term, and by reason of all precedents and his record during his first term there is no valid excuse for a change.

For Representative there will undoubtedly be three or more on the ticket. We presume that the Representative of 1909, John P. Dwyer, will again be on the field, and thus far we have heard but one name which will be brought before the Republican caucus next Tuesday night and that is John W. Cronin of East Weymouth. Mr. Cronin is a man who, by diligent and hard work, has won his way to some distinction as a lawyer, and more than that to the esteem and confidence of his fellowmen, and as we have already said it will be a battle of ballots between him and his leading competitor.

In area Massachusetts is classed among the smaller states of the union but in National affairs and political influence it ranks well at, or near, the top as it always has. During the last session of congress which, by the way, was one of the most important ones in many respects that the country has seen in many decades, our two senators were conspicuous for their power and ability and several of our members on the lower branch won for themselves and the state distinguished honor. A still greater honor however, came to the state when the President selected his cabinet. Massachusetts was the only state from which the President selected two members and Practical Politics in its last issue, which was one of the very best ever published, this speaks of George von L. Meyer, the secretary of the navy and Frank H. Hitchcock, the postmaster general whom President Taft selected.

George von Lengerke Meyer, secretary of the navy, the sole survivor of the cabinet of the Taft cabinet, with the exception of Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury. The most moderate and moderate and a manner gentleman, a woman's, Mr. Meyer conceals a degree of firmness and solid ability which warrant ranking him as one of the most capable cabinet members of the Taft cabinet. Mr. Meyer has grown steadily ever since he entered the government service, and his record of genuine accomplishments, although not paraded about Washington with a brass band and fireworks, is one of which Massachusetts may be proud. In the Roosevelt administration, George B. Norton held three cabinet positions. Mr. Meyer is holding the second, already having been postmaster general under Roosevelt. The first demanded chiefly the essential qualities of a good business man. The second, although reputed to be one of the most desirable social in Washington, requires a business training, even broader and more exacting than that of the postmaster generalship. Through the successful occupancy of this high position by lawyers, the importance of its business phases has been to a large extent, lost sight of by the country. Sec. first time how large a field for the exercise of executive business talent the position presents.

As a young man, Mr. Hitchcock lived something of a strenuous life. His father was a Congregational minister, but the young man's tastes ran to athletics, and while in school and college he was foremost in the games. He played baseball and football, and under his captaincy the Somerville high school nine won the interscholastic championship. He also was a good boxer. His studious strain developed on his entrance to college, however, and during his first years under the government Hitchcock studied law at Columbia University and was admitted to the bar of the District of Columbia.

The future of this young man is one of the most interesting questions discussed in Washington. Hitchcock is the silent member of the Taft cabinet. He says little and writes nothing for publication, nor does he make speeches. He either is or is not a powerful political arm of the Taft administration, but no one at this writing knows which. But there is no doubt that he is a first class postmaster general, and as Pres. Taft has given free rein to his cabinet officers to run their departments as they please, the influence

Weymouth Fore River Long Ago.

A paper read at the August meeting of the Weymouth Historical Society.

Introducing this paper, the President said he was indebted to the facts to the recollections of an aged and lifelong resident of the village.

Only the older men of Weymouth remember how great a harbor was the Fore River, and wharves on Fore River fifty, sixty and seventy years ago.

Active and enterprising men—some from a distance and some native to the soil—were attracted by the opportunities for business afforded by the tide-water channels and landings.

I think that during the years from 1807 to 1840 the yearly business done, on the water-front here, was twelve or fifteen times as large as at the present time. I will enumerate some of the firms I remember.

A. W. Tilden occupied as a shipyard the land now used by John C. Wilder and the land just south of the Weymouth R. R. station. He built there fourty-four (44) vessels: twelve of these were barques, one a schooner and one a sloop, besides all he did in the way of repairs.

Just above his yard, on the spot where now stands the Hollis barn and stables, was the steam planing and sawing mill originally built by Jonathan John Burnell.

He did a good business, which was very much increased by his successors, Frank J. Rand, Peterson, Bradford, and Leonard, who also made doors, sashes and blinds.

On the site of the Weymouth House was the store and office of Col. John C. Cartis, who sold lumber, lime and bricks.

North of the railroad were John C. Rhines, White, Porter & Lons, Whitcomb Porter, Isaac Jackson and Norton and later, Joseph Lons & Co. dealers in grain and wood, becoming later A. J. Richards & Sons, coal and grain; Chessman, Worster, and perhaps others, who lived in wood, bark and coal.

Cole and Holt built the large building, afterwards occupied by Isaac Jackson, and installed a steam engine and other machinery for sawing large logs into slabs and plates. They had a sluice way for drawing in the large logs that were rafted from Bangor and kept a stock of lumber, bricks, lime and bark.

Bicknell and White were building contractors and carpenters, who also kept a stock of lumber, etc. They built many buildings in the northern part of the town.

Associated with the business of these firms was the "Packet Line," viz.: the Washington, Capt. Elijah Bates; the Volante, Capt. Balch Cowing; and the Sarah, Capt. John Hunt, all of which carried passengers and cargo to and from Boston and other ports.

There were the stone shovels, Purser, Capt. Daniel Hunt, J. Lion, Capt. George Nash; and Belle, Capt. Enoch Lathrop.

Joseph Lons had a large trade and owned two schooners sailed by Capt. Samuel Hoskins and Capt. Peter Lons, respectively. They made continuous trips to and from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other grain ports.

Often the cargoes of corn from Boston would keep Lons' large team busy all the time carting it to his grist mill. He also supplied Robinson Mill, which sold meat at wholesale and retail.

Isaac Babband made and repaired furniture and also kept a coal yard. His father Elisha Babband made vinegar and supplied stores in Abington, Bridgewater, Randolph and Boston. He made the vinegar in the basement of his son's furniture store.

There was, of course, call for a great deal of carting in connection with the lumber wharves. One of the teamsters was Solomon Wright, a large strong man, who at one time owned eleven (11) horses and had plenty of work for himself, horses and hired man.

Oliver K. Wheelock from Vermont had a good two horse team and carted lumber but lost his health, after a few years, and sold out to Henry Williams.

Porter & Lons owned a four-horse team of large, handsome, gray horses the equal or a close second, to any four-horse team of draught horses I ever saw. They had also a one-horse team for delivering jobs.

Colonel Abram Thayer did business in smoking hams. His smoke-house was on the corner of Commercial and Tremont streets on the site of the house now occupied by Mr. James W. Rand. Tremont street, then, was nothing but a cart path leading to the old almshouse. The land from Thayer's smoke-house to the residence of Mr. Francis H. Cowing was called "The Paddock" and was filled with large apple trees.

The business done by Col. Thayer in smoking hams was not a small one, as almost every family had one or two hogs to be cured. Thayer had a brand of iron and branded every ham and shoulder. After the hams were taken out there was a large amount of "pickle" left. This pickle was in demand for curing herring. It gave them a fine flavor.

"IN A BAD WAY."

Many a Weymouth Reader Will Feel Grateful for This Information.

When your back gives out; Becomes lame, weak or aching; When urinary troubles set in; Your kidneys are "in a bad way."

Don't let kidney pills cure you. Here is evidence to prove it.

Mrs. E. H. Leighton, 80 Meriden St., Boston, Mass., says: "I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have never out an opportunity during the past three or four years to recommend them. I feel intensely from backache which kept me from getting my proper rest at night. I would be so lame and sore in the morning that I could scarcely drag myself out of bed. The doctor's medicines and numerous other remedies I tried, proved utterly useless and at the suggestion of a friend, began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I am glad to state that they cured me and made me feel better in every way."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Forty-Fifth Fair.

Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Opens Well.

Thursday was a typical "Fair day" and the opening at South Weymouth was good. The several hall committees were kept busy during the morning hours, and the display from field, shop and home is good.

There were many outside attractions, and, weather permitting, today and tomorrow should be good ones, both for the association and its patrons.

Getting the Best.

Published by request.

God has his best things for the few Who dare to stand the test. God has his second choice for those Who will not have the best.

It is not always open sin That makes the promisee's sin. The better sometimes is the foe That keeps us from the best.

There's scarcely one but vaguely wants In some way to be blessed. It is not blessing, Lord, I seek; I want Thy very best.

I want in this short life of mine, As much as may be pressed, To be exactly true for God and man; To give me to give Thy best.

I want amid the victor throng, To have my name confessed, And hear my Savior say at last, "Well done! you took the best."

Give me, my Lord, Thy highest choice; Though others take the rest. Their good things have no charm for me, Since I have found Thy best.

Shoe Industry.

Not until the salesmen shall have interviewed their customers and converted them to the belief that the reason that shoes cannot be cheaper, and more probably higher, is valid, will there be any progress in the industry, for the situation now is most direct, there is no reason why shoes should be made to order in the general market, and only the shipment of goods from the factories to the customers is evidence of life in the business.

The inability to grasp the situation, or the unwillingness to accept a condition that cannot long be ignored, still keeps buyers of shoes out of the market. The fact that the duty has been removed from imported hides is their reason for cheaper shoes, all unmindful of the fact, that shoes to be made must be of leather which cost according to price schedules, and that the duty has been removed from the hides market becomes easier will be leather cost less.

The latter situation seems far removed. The demand for leather for use in shoe manufacture and various industries and arts continues to increase. There are more shoes required each year, to supply the increasing population, and the fact that the automobile industry is dependent to a large degree on leather, used in upholstering the cars; this has been a comparatively recent outlet for leather and must be considered in the reasons of demand and increased cost.

Franchising the manufacture of shoes, and the sharp foreign dealers and exporters have risen to the situation, and argued that if the American customer has paid a price hitherto which was limited by a tariff fee, now that the tariff has been removed, there is no reason why the customer need not be satisfied, can continue to pay the price to which he has become accustomed, and that price will be the same because of the addition of the sum of the duty to the selling price of the hides. By this clever move there is no but the control of prices has been shifted from the domestic beef packers to the foreign hide merchants.

It is in fact of such conditions that the shoe manufacturer is obliged to make a market. "Between the devil and the deep sea," is not a circumstance to the position of the manufacturer. Some of them have gone on hand for a few weeks; there are some small orders for heavy goods being placed, but there is no development of a trade for the next season, and it will be time soon for work on the spring lines if orders are to be delivered on time.

There is no danger of the shoe industry passing without shoes, but there is danger of delay in receiving and filling contracts, and there have been intimations of importations of foreign made shoes to force the domestic prices down.

Orders for staple lines and for medium and high-grade shoes are almost at a standstill. The seasons of fall sales have been in some places and with the approach of cool weather will probably improve. The growth of immediate trade will help to loosen the congestion of new season business, and in spite of present conditions better things are anticipated.

It has been a short summer, but it is understood that the shoe industry has been cleaned out. It will be remembered that buying was conservative, and the fact that the trade is reported inquiring about spring styles and prices, is considered an indication that there will be need of supplies for next year.

These 1910 goods will be plainer than those of this year. There has been less evidence of freak styles. Large perforations have been avoided; edges are closer; women's lines are not so ornate; buckles are not so obtrusive. Dull blacks and patent leathers are expected to find a better sale.

The ankle-stump pump having demonstrated its right to exist and having the stamp of approval set by the wearers, is responsible for the hint taken by many facturers of women's fine goods as the strap is being applied to ankle-strap shoes. These shoes have a pair of eyes in the fore part, for a ribbon lace, but this is more for ornament than for dependence. The ankle-strap has been common of the shoe with the foot, and the whole effect is neat and comfortable. These shoes are being made for the new season in shiny, dull and tan leathers, and also in white canvas—Boston Transcript.

THE LIMIT OF PRAISE.

The limit of praise for food, says the New York Sun, was reached the other day in a Sixth Avenue restaurant, where the old-fashioned confidential Irish waiters are still to be found. A man well known in the place came in very late at night for supper and asked the man who had taken his order for years:

"What's good to-day?"

"I tell you, sir," was the reply, "we've just got some clams in, fresh, from the water, and (this in a whisper) I don't mind telling you, sir, they're so good, the waiters are eating on themselves."

A STRONG HINT.

He had been a regular Sunday caller for six months, when one evening he dropped in arranged in a new suit.

"That's a lovely wedding suit you have on," remarked the dear girl.

"Why," gasped the astonished young man, "this is a business suit!"

"Well," rejoined the d. g. calmly, "I mean business."

And the very next day he put up $19.98 of his hard earned wealth for a suit.

JOHN'S AFFECTIONS PAID.

Leonora O'Reilly, the vice president of the Women's Trade League, was praising this organization's work in New York.

"And it has a great future before it," she said, "I have no doubt that a century hence the members of the league will regard the woman of today as we now regard the farmer's wife of the early 40s."

"A Maine deacon of the early 40s was talking to the minister. He sniffed and whined:

"Oh, yes, Job suffered some. I ain't denyin' that, parson. But Job, when he was here, was what was to have his team run off and kill his wife right in the midst of the harvest season, with hired girls wantin' $2.50 a week."

A MODEL "PRESENTATION" SPEECH.

John Smith had worked for the Valve corporation for forty-two years and decided to quit. The company in consideration of his long and faithful service arranged to give him a monetary recognition.

The superintendent of the works, a German and an extra good mechanic, was asked to present it. He was advised to use a little sentiment in making the speech and this is the way he did it:

"John, you have worked for the company over forty years?"

"Yes."

"You are going to quit?"

"Yes."

"Well! They are so glad of it that they asked me to hand you this hundred dollars."

W. R. C. Notes.

Corps No. 102 was entertained Sept. 9 at the residence of Mrs. May Woodbury, Seaver road, quite a large number responding to her invitation.

Fifty-three members of Corps No. 102 attended Norfolk County Association W. R. C. held at Quincy, Sept. 15. Mrs. S. C. Tucker of Milton was elected president, and Mrs. Emeline Vinson of South Weymouth was elected second vice-president of the association for the coming year. The next meeting of the association will be held the third Wednesday in December at Milton.

Reynolds Corp No. 102 will visit the Soldiers Home at Quincy and present an entertainment for the benefit of the veterans, Wednesday, September 28.

GATHERED UP.

Some people have an absurd notion that unless they are always gathered up, they will be considered dull. Atkinson Globe.

If you wish to be happy in this world there are only three things that can secure you your aim—the love of God, the love of truth and the love of your fellow-men.

"One-half of the world does not know how the other half lives."

"Well, it is gratifying to think that one-half of the world attends to its own business."—Puck.

All the selfishness, all the meanness latent in human nature, come to the surface when the average man or woman sets out on his or her travels. It is indeed true that if you want to know a man it is necessary to travel with him.

"Can't I take your order for one of our encyclopedias?" asked the dapper agent.

"No, I guess not," said the busy man, "I might be able to use it a few times, but my son will be home from college June."

"What would you do if a man should come in and offer to subscribe for three years in advance?"

"I'd tell him I couldn't suppress the story," sighed the country editor.—Washington Herald.

Lady.—"What! Thirty-eight cents for a dozen of eggs? Why, you must have three cents for one egg?"

Grocer.—"Well, mum, you must remember that one egg is a whole day's work for one hen."—Cleveland Leader.

"What sort of a fellow is Swellup?"

"Well, he's one of those fellows that you can never convince that there's plenty of room at the top."

"Possibly, eh?"

"Not at all, but he thinks he's there already and that he occupies all the space."

The new state law in regard to licensing hunters is proving a source of income as 11,000 have come forward and received licenses to hunt. The Massachusetts State Board of Fish and Game Commissioners report that number of licenses granted.

Life is real if not altogether earnest among people of a type recently mentioned.

"If you John is still taking life easy," said the woman in the spring wagon on the road to Alexandria.

"Yes," answered the woman who was carrying an armful of wood. "John has only two regrets in life. One is that he has to wake up to eat, and the other that he has to quit eating to sleep."

"I see by the papers," said the man who reads, "that they have just put a new face on the tenderloin bill."

"So?" asked the man sitting beside him. "I don't suppose any of us here with over have our face on a ten-dollar bill."

"Well, for my part," snipped a man nearby, who had heard them, "I'd rather have my hands on one."

Monday Club.

A new department will be added to the work of the Monday Club under the name of Woman's Exchange.

The club members have expressed much time and thought studying the plans of other clubs that have made this branch of work a success and has kindly consented to take charge of this department.

It is expected each member will contribute some useful or ornamental article, while food and sweets will be acceptable. It is also extremely desired that the ladies will promptly patronize the exchange.

The contribution of articles will not be confined to members of the club, but any resident woman may use the exchange as a market for home made articles. She should send the goods to the same of the committee charging 10 per cent for the sale. A committee will attend to packing such articles that may be left over at any meeting.

Another very practical work will be taken up this year, that of teaching sewing to the girls of our public schools. Two public spirited citizens of the town have offered to contribute liberally if the Old Colony club and the Monday club will furnish one hundred dollars each, it is also expected if this plan is successful that the town treasury will be responsible for introducing sloyd work for the boys of Weymouth.

The success of these schemes will depend upon the energy and generosity of our club members and the fathers and mothers of our school children.

Massachusetts Press Outing.

The Massachusetts Press Association had one of its most enjoyable outings on Monday last, the objective point being Norwood, where the Association was entertained by Capt. A. Stearns Cushing at his handsome Colonial residence in that town. The party, numbering about seventy-five, assembled at the United States hotel in Boston, where they were cordially received by President and Mrs. George C. Fairbanks. At last Thursday's service gave a very interesting review and a number of readings from William Allen White's recent novel, A Certain Rich Man.

An Eccentric Captain.
"Our captain was a straight up and down disciplinarian, and was always rushing into a fight, said a veteran" "One day while in camp in West Virginia, he ordered the company formed in light battling order, and coming out of his tent, placed himself at the head, and without explanation, we marched away at a swinging quickstep. Scarcely a word was spoken during that march of three or four miles up a mountain road, but as the Captain did not march along the bridle path, the boys nudged at each other as much as to say, 'This means trouble for somebody.' We moved along this path until we came to a ridge. We skirted along the lower edge of this until came the order to front face and deploy. We went up the hill stumbling over stones and briars, and Captain expecting himself to keep the line straight as a kink or a curve. Suddenly he gave the order to halt and to fix bayonets. The boys began to talk and the old soldier had lost his senses when he thundered out in measured tones: 'I call the attention of the men who have obeyed my orders so unquestioningly that there lies not more than five feet in front of them the finest patch of luscious blackberries I ever saw in my life. I discovered them yesterday, and after tasting them I resolved to make a secret raid. And here we are. The men will stick their rifles, bayonet down, in the ground, and proceed to pick and eat blackberries.'"

CARD OF THANKS.
We take this occasion to extend our most heartfelt thanks to all our friends and neighbors for timely assistance and words of comfort in our recent bereavement. The kind words, the helpful hands and beautiful floral offering will long be remembered.
